Semiconductor materials are nominally small band gap insulators. The defining property of a semiconductor material is that it can be doped with impurities that alter its electronic properties in a controllable way.

Nanocombs have been synthesized by thermal evaporation of ZnO powder in a tube furnace . The comb-like structures grow on an alumina substrate placed downstream, and growth is only observed in the region where the temperature ranges from $\frac{1}{4}1050\text{--}1250\text{ }^{\circ}\text{C}$, regardless of the evaporation temperature.

A heterojunction is the interface that occurs between two layers or regions of dissimilar crystalline semiconductors. These semiconducting materials have unequal band gaps as opposed to a homojunction.

For the design and realization of ZnO-based devices, one of the most significant issues is doping, which necessarily involves the heavy doping with trivalent elements from the group III (Al, Ga, In).
